

With reference to the Indiana Telephone Privacy law:

1. I request that no proposal be considered that would in any way dilute or lessen the Indiana law as it is now written.

2. The present law has enabled us to enjoy evenings and Saturdays without the hassle of telemarketers hawking everything from replacement windows & siding to credit cards and low rate mortgages. In short, the phone is now at our command and for our use.

3. Before the Phone Privacy Law went into effect, we could expect at the very least 15 calls per week (including Sundays).

4. My wife and I had considered more than once to discontinue the land line phone and switch to cellular only. Illness in the family precluded that idea. In short the Indiana Telephone Privacy law as written eliminated a lot of frayed nerves in our family from telemarketer hucksters.
